

1. For the first few washes

for the first few washing cycles, you should wash your hand tie dye shirts entirely on their own.

generally, up to 3 washes will do the trick

this is an imperative step that allows you to prevent from destroying other clothing pieces.

2. Taking care of your tie dye

Continue to wash your tie dye shirts like you would any other bright colors and colored fabrics.

For and first handful of washes, your dye may run. this means you should ABSOLUTELY AVOID washing these shirts with your white clothing.

3. Drying your tie dye

You can either dry or dry your tie dye shirts in your dryer.

Generally, drying tie dye shirts in your machine will not do too much damage fading wise. Do not dry in direct sunlight after the first 3 washes.

just make sure you take care of them the way you would other bright colored fabrics and avoid washing them on too hot of a setting to prevent the color fading and the fabric shrinking
